

EXTREMIST ANTIENGLITE

HATEMONGER

What if King George had owned 60% of the American media?

He might have given Benjamin Franklin, George Washington, Paul Revere and others bad publicity in order to make them look crazy, stupid and evil. Look at political campaigns. Name-calling is surprisingly powerful in shaping public opinion. It's also very easy if you own a majority of the newspapers, television and radio stations, film studios, etc.

Of course, there weren't any television or radio stations or film studios in 1776. There were newspapers in the colonies, but King George didn't own a single one. Today, however, Jews (2.5% of the American population) hold over 60% of the elite positions in American media.

According to these media, Americans who think media control by axe-grinding outsiders might not be such a good thing are "extremists." Those who are unhappy with unlimited immigration or interracial crime are "hate-mongers." And those who dare to organize and speak publicly are called "anti-Semites" or "White Supremacists."

We are Americans just like you. We believe that the time has come to speak publicly and without fear of name-calling. And we believe it's time to take our country back. Join us today.
